RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

AUG 2018–	Research Assistant for Associate Professor David Seim, Department of Economics, Stockholm University I worked on a research project on fuel consumption and emissions. First, while reading the Swedish Budget Bills from 1918-2018, I collected data on fuel taxes in Sweden. Second, I wrote a report on how Statistics Sweden and Transport Analysis has estimated mileage in Sweden since 1999. Third, using Stata, I visualized and analyzed data from the Swedish Road Traffic Registry.

JUN—NOV 2018	Investigator, Expert Group for Aid Studies, Sweden I wrote a report on the opportunities for evaluating Swedish aid with geocoded data. My investigation involved web scraping in R, and contact with researchers and experts on Swedish aid. I also made an overview of about 250 Swedish aid projects. During my investigation, I had repeated contact with the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (Sida). Moreover, I helped Sida improve their web-based information service about Swedish aid (OpenAid.se).
JUN—AUG 2017	Research Assistant for Adjunct Professor and CEO Nils Karlsson, The Ratio Institute, Sweden I wrote a systematic review of the literature on wage fairness. In brief, the review covered four topics. First, the philosophy of fairness. In particular, the theory of fairness by British philosopher and economist John Broome, and the philosophical underpinnings of wage fairness as defined by the Swedish Trade Union Confederation (LO). Second, mathematical measures of wage fairness (e.g., Atkinson's index). Third, research on fairness in psychology and neurobiology. Fourth, modeling of wage fairness (e.g., models by Ernst Fehr, George Akerlof, and others). I end the report with a conceptual model of wage fairness and policy-relevant conclusions.
